Oilers keep on rolling

Edmonton rebounded from a 4-2 loss to Phoenix on Saturday to post their seventh win in eight games, 3-1. For the story, see page 22.

Policing a priority for the province: Solicitor general

- Denis deems law enforcement a focal point in budget talks
- Edmonton, Calgary want more officers with help from province

Funding for more police boots on the streets of Edmonton could be something the province is willing to commit to.

Alberta's new solicitor general and public security minister, Jonathan Denis, said he has already met with police chiefs in Edmonton and Calgary, as well as senior members of the RCMP, to discuss future goals.

"I can tell you that law enforcement is a priority for this government. ... We are mindful of particularly the needs of our major cities," he said, adding provincial budget preparations are ongoing.

Last month, Edmonton Police Service Chief Rod Knecht said he wants 100 new officers for 2012, as some are being pulled from other departments to work homicide.

Some city councillors believe the province should help, especially since Edmonton is facing a tough budget.

"It obviously takes a substantial amount of funding to hire more police officers and the province has, in the past, provided some funding for police officers," said Coun. Karen Leibovici. "Any new funding ... would be very welcome."

But Denis cautioned that money does not necessarily equate to an immediate fix for any law-enforcement shortcomings.

He noted that during his previous post as housing and urban affairs minister, he was able to trim spending by 39 per cent but still achieved better results.

"I am open to addressing issues on a results basis," said Denis. "There's always room to improve,

A tale of two cities

- Overall, Edmonton has about 200 fewer officers than Calgary, according to Edmonton Police Association president Tony Simioni.
- Simioni said EPS has barely kept up with recruiting officers to replace those retiring, 50 of whom are supposed to hang up their badges this year.
- Mike Shaikh, with the Calgary Police Commission, said he would like to see 150 more officers in his city should the province fund 100 in Edmonton.
- Edmonton has recorded 40 homicides this year, the most in the country and roughly five times the number recorded in Calgary.

QR codes get a little more natural

Learning about the plant life at the Muttart Conservatory just got easier.

QR codes, which are matrix barcodes readable by smartphones with cameras and the appropriate app, were launched yesterday at noon.

"There are pictures, scientific names and facts about some of the plants," said Nicole Fraser, public interpretation program co-ordinator. "It's a mobile-friendly web walking tour."

There are still guided walking tours three times per day on Saturdays and Sundays, but the QR tour can be done at any time and at a visitor's own pace, though each is designed to last 15 minutes.

Muttart director Heather Seutter said visitors from around the world are used to using QR codes and that they're becoming more popular.

Fraser hopes the new technology will encourage more youth to visit.

Kiri Wysynski, communications for city attractions, said this type of QR app and mobile-based webpage is a first for the city.

The Edmonton Public Schools board of trustees last night edged closer to making schools inclusive, regardless of the sexual orientation and gender of students, families and staff.

The board heard dozens of opinions for and against the proposed Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity Policy before voting unanimously to consider it further.

"For me, I have been committed to this policy for so long it feels like a second skin," said EPSB chair Dave Colburn.

Some argued the policy violates human rights, while others questioned its necessity.

"We don't believe the policy is necessary and would like to see the board enforce the current policy," said Graham Greenwood, of the Citizens for Diversity

Crosby, Nash and pot still mix well

Musicians David Crosby and Graham Nash delivered a touch of Woodstock to Occupy demonstrations in New York City yesterday.

The white-haired duo led a chant of "No More War!" and played a 20-minute acoustic performance for about 1,000 protesters and onlookers.

An air of nostalgia — and the smell of marijuana — wafted over the crowd as the pair had fans humming along to hits like Teach Your Children Well.

"These relics of Woodstock came and supported our movement," said 19-year-old Tyler Westcott, a college student.

Occupy Nova Scotia protesters have moved camp — for now.

The group has packed up its encampment — set up in front of Halifax city hall on Oct. 15 — and moved to a park across downtown.

The move was made so the occupiers wouldn't interfere with Remembrance Day ceremonies.

"If anything, I think this move has actually made us stronger as a community," said John Thibreau, a protest spokesperson.

But the group does not have access to electricity at Victoria Park. "I know there's power here. But the city came in and cut it off to

The federal government will create a new committee to study veterans' health.

The move comes in the wake of a hunger strike by an ex-soldier who insists he was contaminated by depleted uranium while serving in Bosnia.

Depleted uranium has been used to make munitions and military armour.

Veterans Affairs Minister Steven Blaney announced the new panel in Levis, Que., after Pascal

Lacoste, who battled to get Ottawa to recognize his uranium poisoning while serving overseas, flashed a two-fingered "victory" sign as he ended his hunger strike.

U.S. Air Force admits mortuary lost body parts of war dead

The Air Force mortuary that receives U.S. war dead and prepares them for burial lost portions of human remains twice in 2009, officials said yesterday.

The Air Force disciplined three officials for "gross mismanagement," the officials said.

A yearlong Air Force investigation reviewed 14 sets of allegations of improper handling of war remains as reported by three whistle-blower workers at Dover Air Force Base, Del.

One worker complained about the handling of the remains of a Marine killed by a roadside bomb in Afghanistan.

It was claimed mortuary officials acted improperly in sawing off an arm bone because it protruded in a way that prevented his body from being placed in his uniform for viewing.

The Marine's family had requested seeing him in his uniform but was not told of the decision to remove the bone.

None of the three Air Force officials found to be at fault at Dover was fired.

HAITIAN VICTIMS

UN faces big bill for cholera?

A human rights group has filed claims with the United Nations seeking damages on behalf of 5,000 Haitian cholera victims and their families.

The claims by the Boston-based Institute for Justice and Democracy in Haiti argue the UN is liable for millions of dollars for failing to adequately screen peace-keeping soldiers.

The Institute is seeking a minimum of $100,000 for each bereaved family and $50,000 for each cholera survivor.

Cholera has sickened 500,000 people and killed more than 6,500 others since it surfaced in Haiti in October 2010.

Evidence suggests that the disease was brought to Haiti by a UN battalion from Nepal, where cholera is endemic.

A contractor failed to sanitize the waste of a UN base, and the bacteria leaked into a tributary of Haiti's most important river, said a study by a UN-appointed panel.

The UN has immunity from national courts but "one would hope the secretary general would address this with great moral seriousness," said Ruth Wedgwood, of Johns Hopkins' School of Advanced International Studies.

Huge asteroid zips past Earth

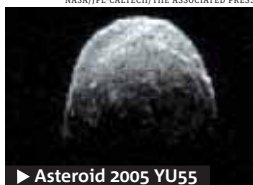

► Humans may want to visit 2005 YU55 because it contains carbon-based materials, possibly frozen water

An asteroid as big as an aircraft carrier zipped by Earth yesterday in the closest encounter by such a massive space rock in more than three decades.

Scientists ruled out any chance of a collision but turned their telescopes skyward to learn more about the object known as 2005 YU55.

Its closest approach to Earth was pegged at a distance of 325,088 kilometres at 6:28 p.m. EST. That's just inside the moon's orbit; the average distance between Earth and the moon is 384,633 kilometres.

The last time a large cosmic interloper came that close to Earth was in 1976, and it won't happen again until 2028.

Scientists at NASA's Deep Space Network in the California desert have tracked the quarter-mile-wide asteroid since last week as it approached from the direction of the sun at 46,671 km/h.

Astronomers and amateur skygazers around the world kept watch, too.

The Clay Center Observatory in Massachusetts planned an all-night viewing party so children and parents could peer through research-grade telescopes and listen to lectures. The asteroid can't be detected with the naked eye.

For those without a telescope, the observatory streamed video of the fly-by live on Ustream, attracting several thousand viewers. The asteroid appeared as a white dot against a backdrop of stars.

Since its discovery six years ago, scientists have been monitoring the spherical, coal-coloured asteroid as it slowly spins through space. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Italy's PM resigns for 'good of the country'

- ▶ Italy's $2.6-trillion debt too big for Europe to bail out
- ▶ No guarantee of new credible government: Analyst

Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi yesterday conceded support to govern and announced he would resign like his Greek counterpart, becoming the biggest political casualty yet of the European debt crisis.

Berlusconi promised to leave office after parliament passes economic reforms demanded by the European Union to keep Italy from sinking into Europe's debt mess. He came to the decision hours after a vote on a routine piece of legislation made it clear he no longer commanded a majority in the lower Chamber of Deputies.

A vote on the reform measures is planned for next week, giving Berlusconi a few more days before his turbulent 17 years in public life — and a political era in Italy — draw to a close. Over the years, Italy's political establishment watched as the media mogul survived sex scandals and corruption charges while branding his opponents communists, traitors and terrorists.

Both Italy and Greece are under heavy pressure to reassure financial markets that the 17-country eurozone is moving quickly to reduce crippling government debts before they break apart the monetary union and plunge the world into a new recession.

Berlusconi last week took the humiliating step of asking the International Monetary Fund to monitor the country's reform efforts in a bid to reassure markets. Today, a separate European Union monitoring mission is to begin work in Rome to review measures taken so far.

The EU's questionnaire, put to Italy ahead of the mission, said additional measures will be needed beyond what Italy has pledged to do to balance the budget by 2013, according to the text shown on Italian television.

In yesterday's routine lower-house budget vote that became a test of Berlusconi's support, the prime minister garnered 308 votes of approval, leaving him eight votes shy of what he needs to claim a majority.

Once Berlusconi resigns, Italian President Giorgio Napolitano will begin political consultations to form a new government. The most widely discussed name to lead a government is Mario Monti, the former EU competition commissioner.

Meanwhile, a usually defiant Berlusconi acknowledged he no longer has a parliamentary majority and said he will step aside for the good of the country.

"Things like who leads or who doesn't lead the government" are less important than doing "what is best for the country."

Central banks must act: Carney

The global economy is being confronted with a new wave of credit tightening as a result of the European debt crisis that will subdue growth in many countries, Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney warns.

In his first speech since being named by G20 leaders to the head of the international body in charge of banking reform, Carney used a keynote speech to a London business audience yesterday to stress the need for quick action to increase global liquidity.

In his speech, Carney was connecting the dots on how he will use his three-year posting at the Financial Stability Board to try to end the boom-and-bust liquidity cycles that constantly plague the global economy.

"Over the medium term, the continuation of such extreme liquidity cycles could ultimately threaten open capital markets and a free trading system if not better addressed," he said.

With private liquidity drying up over concerns about sovereign debt in Europe, Carney said it is again up to the public sector, in particularly central banks, to ensure there is sufficient credit available at reasonable terms for businesses and households to continue to invest and spend.

Tories to miss target for balanced budget

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty conceded yesterday he won't be able to balance the federal budget in four years as promised, but he moved to lighten the load on workers and businesses by reducing a planned increase in payroll taxes.

Warning Canada's economic recovery is fragile and slowing, Flaherty said he is ready to go further if conditions continue to deteriorate.

month that the budget assumptions of economic growth were no longer applicable, which would mean Ottawa's revenues from tax receipts would be lower than anticipated. Economists warned that the risks were rising.

This questions whether the Conservatives can fulfil election promises that were contingent on a balanced budget.

In total, the government is adding about $29 billion in red ink from the current year to the end of the planning horizon in 2015-16.

Flaherty said despite the bleaker outlook, the likelihood of Canada entering another recession in the near term is slim. He said while flexibility is important, the government can't afford to break the bank either.

Imagine the world is crazy. It's easy if you try.

In fact, the world is now crazier than anything John Lennon could imagine when he wrote that song.

For example, Lennon probably never imagined that an Alberta dentist would pay $31,200 for his rotten, tartar-infested molar at an auction.

The tooth in question is in such bad condition it can't be DNA-tested. But its provenance is secure. Lennon gave it to his housekeeper to dispose of. She kept it and gave it to her daughter instead. Now the family has sold it to the Tooth Fairy, a.k.a. Michael Zuk, who plans to enshrine it in his waiting room back in Red Deer, along with other historical artifacts, such as stale-dated copies of National Geographic and Canadian Dental Quarterly.

I write this every week, it seems: I am not making this up.

If there was any doubt that celebrities have become the new saints of the reality-show religion, that has been dispelled by this latest dubious purchase.

Every medieval church worth its steeple harbours a shrivelled nose or finger bone, and although no one can actually prove they're parts of a saint, these holy bits and pieces still attract pilgrims, who hope some of

John Lennon tried to imagine a world without religion. But we just can't help ourselves. We need to have a higher power — someone to watch over us. It helps to have access to that power, hence the attraction of holy relics. People still believe in the Shroud of Turin, even though it's most certainly a medieval fraud.

But John Lennon's rotten tooth? The martyred Beatle once got himself into hot water for declaring that the Beatles were more popular than Jesus Christ. Imagine he was right. Still, it's no weirder than the shock of Elvis hair that went for $100,000 or Cher's bra that went to the Hard Rock Cafe, or Britney Spears' wad of chewed gum that generated a $14,000 bid on eBay. (Also offered: her half-eaten corn dog and egg-salad sandwich. Yuck.)

Clearly, if you're famous, even for 15 minutes (like Britney), every chunk is priceless. Michael Zuk may have $31,000 less, but he does have an indisputable chunk of the greatest Beatle. Paul McCartney's probably going, "I wonder how much one of my decayed molars is worth?"

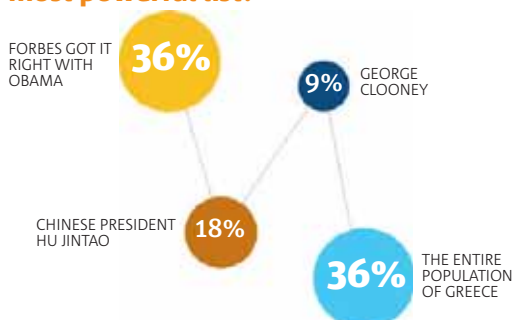

Not as much as John Lennon's, pal. Imagine the rest of him is in heaven. We take what we can get.

In some areas of Israel, women have been shunted onto separate sidewalks, and buses and health clinics have been gender-segregated. The military has considered reassigning some female combat soldiers because religious men don't want to serve with them.

This is the new reality in parts of 21st-century Israel, where ultra-Orthodox rabbis are trying to contain the encroachment of secular values on their cloistered society through a fierce backlash against the mixing of the sexes in public.

On the surface, Israel's gender equality bona fides seem strong, with the late Golda Meir as a former prime minister and Tzipi Livni as the current opposition leader. But the World Economic Forum recently released 2009 data stating Israeli women earned two-thirds what men did.

Secularists in Israel worry that their lifestyles could be targeted because the ultra-Orthodox population is growing.

Their high birthrate of about seven children per family is forecast to send their proportion of the population, now estimated at nine per cent, to 15 per cent by 2025.

Peacocks, prostitutes and pot found in Mexico prison

Authorities say a surprise search at an Acapulco prison in Mexico has netted two peacocks, 100 fighting cocks, 19 prostitutes and two sacks filled with marijuana.

Police in the Mexican resort city also found dozens of televisions, several bottles of alcohol and knives.

Guerrero state spokesman Arturo Martinez says federal and state police searched the prison before dawn Monday.

Martinez didn't say how the women, birds and the other banned objects got into the prison.

He referred to the peacocks as "pets."

The resort city has been plagued by crime since last year when gangs began fighting for control after the arrest of Edgar Valdez Villarreal, also known as "La Barbie."

According to Sky News, Guerrero state has the third highest rate of murders in the country, falling behind Chihuahua and Nuevo Leon, both of which are northern border states. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

After winning an Oscar for his screenplay for Milk, another biopic should have been a piece of cake for Dustin Lance Black. Of course, the life of infamous FBI leader J. Edgar Hoover is no ordinary biography — especially given Hoover's penchant for secrecy about pretty much everything in his life, including his rumored lifelong love affair with Clyde Tolson.

And while the magazine defended itself by claiming they were making light of Lautner's universally accepted hotness, Black still found their apology satisfactory. "They apologized," he says.

The film covers a wide span of Hoover's life. When you were writing it, did you know it would be played by Leonardo DiCaprio?

No, in fact I try not to consider casting when I'm writing — especially a biopic like this, when I don't have the opportunity to meet the real guy. It's enough work to try and figure out who he was and get a handle on how he might've been, how he might've talked, the things he might've been thinking and feeling, his behaviour — you know, all that's tough enough.

At what point did you know Leonardo DiCaprio would be playing the part?

Things moved very quickly once I turned in the script. Brian Grazer got it to Clint Eastwood, and while Clint was reading it I got a phone call from my lawyer — who works at the same firm Leo's represented by — and they said, 'Hey, you're not showing this to anyone else, are you?' I mean, I was very excited that it was Leo, if that's what you want to know about, because this movie was supposed to be about subverting some expectations — confirming some things and subverting others — and one of them was this was a young man who was very promising and handsome, and starlets did throw themselves at him and he could get the best seat at the best club in New York when he went. People don't think of Hoover like that.

Chasing an outcome of income

▶ Drake looking to Take Care of business on latest album ▶ Despite an early leak, a sales success still expected

PAT HEALY

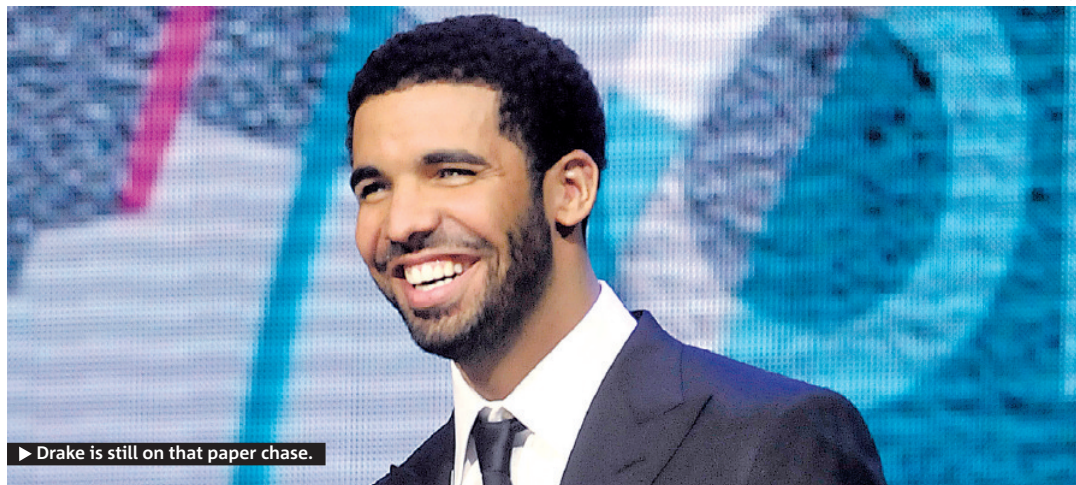

SCENE@METRONWS.CA

METRO WORLD NEWS IN BOSTON

Drake's highly anticipated sophomore album, Take Care, hit the web earlier this week.

"Are these people really discussin' my career again, asking if I be going platinum in a year again?," he asks in the lead-off track, Over My Dead Body.

Well, yes, they are, because the Canadian rapper has talent on the mic. He combines venomous taunts with philosophical gems like "Jealousy is just love and hate at the same time," and, "You lose some, you win some, as long as the outcome is income." And yeah, both of these pearls are in that same first track.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Drake is still on that paper chase.

Take Care will most likely end with an outcome of income, as it has guest stars galore that run the gamut from soul legends (Stevie Wonder lends his signature harmonica to Doing it Wrong) to guests that pop music powers-that-be would probably fine you if you didn't use somewhere, such as Rihanna, Nicki Minaj and Lil' Wayne.

When Drake is rapping, he gets to the point fast and his rhymes are often loaded with as many thoughts per minute as any vintage Dylan song, but the songs on Take Care are spacious, and one, Marvin's Room, Buried Alive even clocks in at more than eight minutes. He is also impressively smooth when he is singing.

The beats are tight, and the chorus hooks are spot-on, but the one-liners are really the biggest highlights of this album.

Our favourite?

"You ain't the only one that's trying to be the only one," he says in We'll Be Fine.

The only thing that is jarring on Take Care is when Drake changes the mood entirely. A song like Practice, will start as a smooth R&B jam, but then out of nowhere Drake will drop a line like, "Girl, you look good, why don't you back that ass up?"

Well, this approach has probably worked for Drake in his romantic practice, and it will probably work for him in his career too.

Inside the mind of Darrell Hammond

► SNL star pens book about his life as an addict and being abused by his mom ► Memoir isn't a depressing read

No one was more shocked than Darrell Hammond when Donald Trump appeared on CNN to discuss the comedian's life.

"I mean, that's like, through the looking glass," Hammond says. "That's like, J.Lo-level. I'm a little stunned by it."

But when you probe into Hammond's life through his new memoir, *God, If You're Not Up There, I'm F*cked*, all the attention makes sense.

Though the public already knew Hammond for his spot-on impressions of Sean Connery and Bill Clinton, performed during his 14 years on Saturday Night Live, the book reveals shocking details of his personal life as an addict who suffered years of abuse from his mother as a kid.

"In staying silent all those years — most of the time because I didn't really know, because all those memories were repressed — it made me sick. And when people get sick, they exhibit abhorrent behaviour," Hammond says.

"The thing that occurs to me is that abhorrent behaviour is not an airborne virus. You don't get it because you sat on the wrong toilet seat in the subway station.

Something has to occur to have caused it. Suddenly I realized I'm not ashamed of this at all. I've been knocked down on the canvas a number of times and I've never not gotten up."

The book details not only behind-the-scenes moments at SNL, but also darker times, like when Hammond was escorted off-set in a straight jacket.

Yet throughout, amazingly, Hammond maintains a wry humour.

Now sober and with future plans to appear on TBS's Are We There Yet? Hammond can recall the pain of previous years from the perspective of a man who is finally healing.

"I have a very banal little life," he says happily. "I have a modest apartment and I visit my friends in the diner. Nothing really exciting happens at all, which is fine.

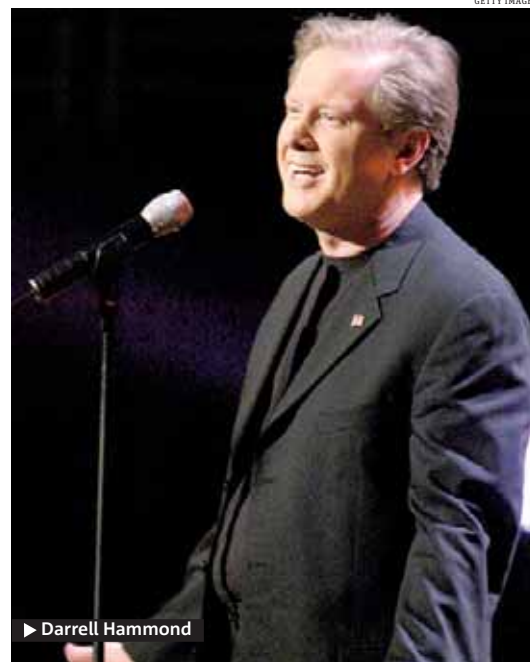

It's nice to not be living in fear of your voice mail — really dark figures that you meet, creatures of the night when you're crawling around the West Village between 4 and 6 a.m.

DARRELL HAMMOND

I call that neighbourhood the hell mouth because that's where I would meet people that could take me to places where I didn't need to go, but I was going to go to anyway.

None of this was going to stop until I stopped being angry."

iPad, can you read me a nice bedtime story?

- ▶ Audiobooks used to be more for hardcore commuters
- ▶ Now they're gaining popularity with Generation Y

GINA ANGELOTTI
SCENE@METRONews.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

Do you recall when you first heard the words “and they all lived happily ever after”?

For many, it was a time when storytelling was a daily ritual and a window to a world where everything was possible. Now it's even easier to rediscover that sensation.

For Generation Y, tapping into nostalgia is as simple as tapping a finger on an LCD screen.

Smart devices offer them unlimited access to the cultural references that shaped their lives.

A survey by comScore in April revealed 18 to 34 year-olds represent nearly half of all iPad owners.

Not surprisingly, then, this tech-savvy age group is the driving force behind increasing audiobook sales — up 40 per cent so far this year according to Megan Fitzpatrick, senior manager of Hachette publishing's audio division.

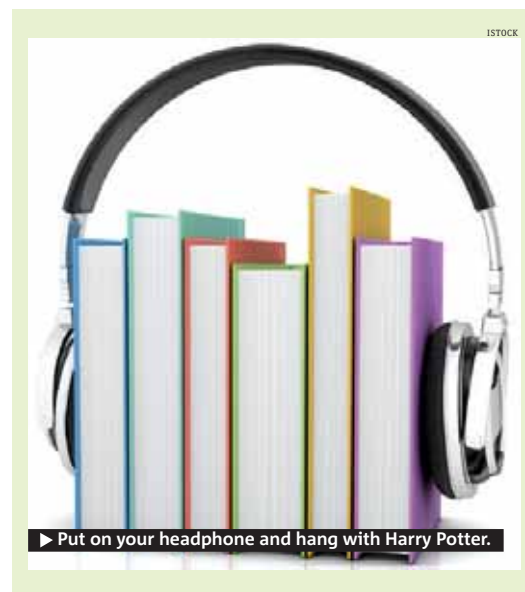

No longer just convenient for a long road trip or commute, audiobooks fill a void.

Sure, these mp3s feed a hunger for instant gratification, but they also satisfy the innately human tradition of oral storytelling.

It's an old idea resurrected for new media. And in an era of more options but less leisure time, audiobooks encourage listeners to multitask. Plugged in Millennials economize pleasure, education and work simultaneously.

Although they're often accused of having short attention spans, Fitzpatrick argues that young audiobook listeners actually tend to be avid readers, adding that they prefer unabridged titles.

“Audiobooks take active engagement, compelling listeners to pay attention to every word and to the cadence of the language,” she says.

Moreover, the “cinematic totality” of a narration with high production values can turn otherwise apathetic readers into literary connoisseurs.

While they're portable and palatable, audiobooks aren't cheap to make, so be wary of the 99 cent variety.

“Efficient isn't a word easily applied to the profit margin on audiobooks,” says Fitzpatrick, noting that purchasing rights, editorial and marketing overhead and quality control of the recording itself hike up a publisher's costs and therefore the end cost for consumers.

But it's an investment both are willing to make if the finished product stands up to its hardcover counterpart.

One way publishers close the quality-value gap is by casting celebrity narrators.

Though they don't drive down the bottom line, they do boost the cred — and sales — of audiobooks.

“When a performer is paired with the perfect material, the words sparkle in ways that the printed word can't always compete with,” Fitzpatrick says, citing David Sedaris and Tina Fey as prime examples.

Oddly enough, in their respective best-selling audio works both authors kvetch on a subject that pulls at the heart and purse strings of a nostalgic Generation Y: memories of a not-too-distant youth.

SANDLER DUPLICATING ORIGINALS

IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Ben Affleck did it. So did Eddie Murphy and Charlie Chaplin. Heck, Alec Guinness did it eight times, including once as a woman. This weekend in Jack and Jill, Adam Sandler adds his name to the list of actors who have played multiple roles in the same film.

"In Jack and Jill I play me," says Sandler, "and I play my twin sister. The man version of me is doing OK; he has a family out in L.A. The twin-sister version of me lives out in the Bronx and comes out to L.A. for Thanksgiving and then refuses to leave."

The idea of playing more than one role in a movie dates back to the Mary Pickford 1918 weepy Stella Maris.

In it she plays the wealthy title character and the uneducated orphan Unity Blake.

The studio balked at her insistence on playing both roles, but Pickford insisted.

As Stella she was photographed like a glamorous movie star, but as Unity she wore unflattering makeup and was shot from her right, less photogenic, side. Scenes where the two characters shared the screen were achieved through double exposure.

Since then everyone from Mel Brooks (he was President Skroob and Yorgut in Spaceballs), to David Carradine (remember him in Circle of Iron as The Blind Man, Monkeyman, Death, and Changsha?) to Peter Sellers (who played as Group Captain Lionel Mandrake, President Merkin Muffley, and Dr. Strangelove in Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb) have taken on multi-roles.

Perhaps because of their sketch comedy backgrounds, Eddie Murphy and Mike Myers often take on various roles in their films, but Alec Guinness, the actor best known in North America as Jedi knight Obi-Wan Kenobi, must hold the record for character changes in one feature-length movie.

In Kind Hearts and Coronets he plays no less than eight characters.

In an acting tour de force he's easily recognizable in each part, but doesn't repeat himself from character to character. Instead he carefully constructs each, from the happy-go-lucky young photographer to the window-smashing suffragette Lady Agatha.

Rivaling Guinness's achievement is Buster Keaton who played every part — including a stagehand, a dance troupe, a full band and every member in the audience — in the 1921 short film The Play House.

To top it off he also took credit for every crew job including editor, director, writer and cameraman.

Ratner sorry for slur

► Tower Heist director apologizes for gay remark ► Academy accepts it

Brett Ratner said Monday that he's sorry for using a gay slur during a question-and-answer session at a screening for his new film.

The 42-year-old filmmaker, who is set to produce next year's Academy Awards, issued a statement apologizing "for any offence my remarks caused."

Ratner used a pejorative term to describe gay men in response to a question asked at a screening of his latest movie, Tower Heist.

"It was a dumb way of expressing myself," Ratner said in his statement. "Everyone who knows me knows that I don't have a prejudiced bone in my body. But as a storyteller I should have been much more thoughtful about the power of language and my choice of words."

Tom Sherak, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, said Monday that Ratner's remarks were "inappropriate" but the academy isn't planning to remove him from his Oscar-producing position.

"The bottom line is, this won't and can't happen again. It will not happen again," Sherak said. "The apology he gave I truly believe comes from his heart."

► Rexall Place hosting Canadian Finals Rodeo, featuring one of the sport's richest purses

With buckin' broncos, buckles and nearly $1.4 million up for grabs, the Canadian Finals Rodeo kicks off this week.

Beginning today and running through to Sunday, Rexall Place will host some of the best rodeo action North America has to offer.

"Not only are we providing adrenaline-packed competition, we're here to entertain our guests and offer an experience unlike any other," said Richard L. Andersen, Northlands president and CEO.

Rodeo competitors have been working towards this event all season, earning points to secure a spot at the CFR, the Canadian championships.

Only the top 12 in each discipline have earned a spot to compete at the CFR.

There will also be a number of novice events during each of the six performances.

The CFR has been held at Rexall Place annually since 1974 and offers one of the richest purses in Canadian rodeo.

Aside from the heart-pounding action from the best rodeo athletes in North America, spectators will also be treated to a number of special performances, different to each show.

Tomorrow, fans will see a new Miss Rodeo Canada 2012 crowned and will say farewell to Miss Rodeo Canada 2011.

Also tomorrow, and included in their CFR ticket, Academy of Country Music and CMT award winner Blake Shelton will perform live in the dirt at 7 p.m.

Friday, the CFR will pay tribute to our military with Remembrance Day ceremonies.

After the performance, spectators can relive the action with friends over at the Buckle, the official party headquarters of the CFR. The Buckle is open tomorrow to Saturday at the Edmonton EXPO Centre and features music, food, drinks and fun.

And holding to CFR tradition, Farmfair is back for agriculture enthusiasts.

Clowning around

Being charged at by a buckin' bronco or bull may not seem like a dream job for most, but for Dennis Halstead, nothing brings him more joy.

"It is just like being thrown in a dryer," says Halstead, who is also a member of the Calgary Fire Department.

Halstead will be this year's Canadian Finals Rodeo Professional Rodeo Clown and Barrelman, a first for Halstead.

Halstead has more than a decade of experience entertaining rodeo fans and teaching children about the sport of rodeo.

Aside from making the crowds laugh and ensuring everyone is enjoying the show, the rodeo clown has one of the most dangerous jobs in the show.

Along with two bullfighters in the dirt with him, Halstead's job is to make sure the athletes are protected, even if it means taking a hit in his barrel from one of the animals.

Agricultural roots will be on display at Farmfair

With more than 1,000 head of cattle, 800 horses, alpacas and stock dogs, it's no wonder thousands of people flock to Edmonton to see, show and sell livestock at Farmfair.

"Northlands has strong agriculture roots and Farmfair demonstrates both our history and what we're doing now to support the industry into the future," said Northlands spokesperson Jennifer Guzzwell.

Farmfair is Canada's premiere agricultural showcase with top quality livestock shows, sales and competitions.

It has held the reins as the top destination for the international livestock industry and hub for agricultural business for more than 35 years.

Visitors to Farmfair can expect to be entertained, educated and engaged with beefed-up cattle shows and events, world-class equine sales, competitions, and clinics.

This year, Northlands' Farmfair introduces Bloodstock 2011, a premier horse sale bringing together some of the top bloodlines in the industry for a high-calibre auction and a prime marketing opportunity for horse breeders.

"This initiative capitalizes on the growing number of ranch, rodeo, agriculture and performance horse enthusiasts that visit Northlands each year for Farmfair and Canadian Finals Rodeo," said Richard L. Andersen, Northlands president and chief executive officer.

Farmfair has also collaborated with Olds Fall Classic and Lloydminster Stockade Round-Up to introduce the Alberta Supreme Championship.

Kids to experience some Rodeo Magic

This morning is nothing but magic for 150 special needs children at Rexall Place.

Rodeo Magic is a Northlands tradition that helps these children see what it takes to be a rodeo star, alongside a rodeo star.

"It's fantastic to see our CFR contestants and rodeo royalty come out to support this great event during the CFR," said Northlands spokesperson Jennifer Guzzwell.

Upon arriving at Rexall, the children are given a passport and have to complete tasks with their rodeo star.

The children also get to encounter a number of farm animals, such as dogs, horses and donkeys while they make their way through the various events.

Lunch is also included before they head back to school.

"Northlands is a community service organization and Rodeo Magic is just one of the ways we are involved with the community," said Guzzwell. ● CANDICE WARD

Celebrating all things cowboy

Edmonton, it's time to get into the country spirit with River City Round Up.

River City Round Up (RCR) is a 10-day, city-wide festival aimed at celebrating Edmonton's agriculture and western heritage through a number of signature events put on by Northlands and other festivities happening throughout the city.

"The goal is to get everyone in the cowboy spirit," said RCR spokesperson Tamara Fahlman. "It is really all things cowboy."

In partnership with the city of Edmonton, RCR embodies all that is cowboy in Edmonton, centred around Farmfair and the Canadian Finals Rodeo.

Olde Time Fair

► If you missed the first Olde Time Fair on the Square, River City Round Up will be holding another one Saturday. The event will begin at Churchill Square at 10 a.m. and run until 3 p.m.

All businesses and organizations are encouraged to get in on the action by bringing their own country spirit to the way they do business.

The big kickoff took place Saturday in Churchill Square with Olde Time Fair on the Square.

Aside from the CFR, there are a number of country-related events going on throughout the city.

On Friday, the Ladies of Professional Rodeo will be holding a luncheon and fashion show at the West-in.

If you are looking for live country music, check out country hits at The Rose and Crown Pub through to Sunday for daily live performances from artists Neil Macdonald and Andrew Scott.

For those looking for items uniquely western, the Ram Country Market Place at the Edmonton EX-PO Centre may have just what you are looking for. For more, visit rivercity-roundup.com.

Farms in the spotlight

If there wasn't already enough excitement packed into the Canadian Finals Rodeo weekend, Northlands has added another new event for the kids.

New to the Farmfair tradition is the Fair at Farmfair, a chance for children aged five to 12 to learn about farm life through rides, games, exhibits, sideshows and demonstrations.

"Northlands is proud to introduce the Fair at Farmfair as part of Canada's premiere agriculture showcase," said Northlands spokesperson Jennifer Guzzwell.

"This program ties together education and entertainment, and will include agriculture educational programming, cooking demonstrations and local food products."

The Fair is a country fair themed midway that features enclosed tents, draped booths and hands-on activities.

The Fair is designed to be a place where families can have fun, celebrate the food grown in the community and learn about the relationship between the farm and the food they grow.

Admission to the Fair at Farmfair is free with your purchase of your Farmfair gate admission.

Melissa McCarthy promotes Ivory — and jumpsuits

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

► She was by far the funniest and most likeable Bridesmaid ► Now the Mike & Molly star is starting her own plus-sized clothing line

THE WORD

DOROTHY ROBINSON
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

After she took the stage to launch Ivory Soap's new Soap Dish Facebook community for moms in New York

City on Monday night — and was presented with a giant bar of Ivory carved in her likeness — Melissa McCarthy took a few moments to chat with Metro about the possibility of a sequel to Bridesmaids, the summer blockbuster that made her a household name.

"[It's a] yes for me, [but I] don't know that it's happening," she told us.

"I'll basically show up anywhere with those women — even if it's like a long bus trip, I'll go with them — but no talk of it yet. I think everyone's so busy. But I wouldn't mind it down the road just because I love that group."

McCarthy is indeed keeping very busy.

Not only did she win an Emmy this year for her sitcom Mike & Molly, but she's also developing her own clothing line for plus-sized women.

"It's so preliminary right now. I know I want a jumpsuit in it. I'm not afraid of it. I love a jumpsuit."

And when we asked if she's creating the line to be a role model for girls who aren't a size zero, the awesome actress just laughs.

"No, I think I'm just selfishly making it for myself!"

She elaborates: "I want separates, for the love of God, because everything's like a bad prom dress. You can find a million bad sleeveless dresses in satin. I'm like, 'Where's a good blouse and great trouser?'"

On Biebs: 'He's cute, isn't he?'

While Justin Bieber is reportedly prepared to take a paternity test to disprove a fan's claim he fathered her 4-month-old son, he's not waiting to voice his displeasure at the scandal.

"There's been a lot of crap on the Internet lately, but I've pulled through," he told press at the MTV Europe Music Awards in Belfast, Ireland over the weekend, according to Hollyscoop.

Bieber's girlfriend, Selena Gomez — who was hosting the event — was less inclined to address the issue.

When Katy Perry tried to press her on the baby drama, Gomez simply replied,

"He's cute, isn't he?"

Big Apple shopping

► The holiday season in New York kicks off with American Thanksgiving ► The city celebrates the upcoming retail-mad months with glittering events, jolly gift markets and traffic-stopping window displays ► Try one-stop shops to maximize gift-buying time

EMMA E. FORREST
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

New York is one of the most iconic places for Christmas shopping. Not only does the city display how to shop for the holidays in style, but the shopping season starts early, too.

Holiday shopping in the Big Apple kicks off with the Thanksgiving Day festival, on the third Thursday of November. The festival is marked by the annual Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, a colourful event that snakes all the way across Manhattan to the famous department store.

The next day is one of the biggest shopping days of the year — Black Friday. This crazy day of sales takes place on the Friday after Thanksgiving Day, with bargain-hunters taking the day off work to line up overnight to catch the best discounts.

From then on, it's open season on the shopping front. There are several holiday markets offering a mix of gift ideas. Bryant Park is home to booths selling clothes, quirky gifts, crafts and jewelry at The Holiday Shops (Until Jan. 8, theholidayshopsatbryantpark.com). You'll find more than 100 red and white booths selling affordable gifts, as well as vouchers for local stores, at the Union Square Holiday Market (Nov. 18 to Dec. 24, urbanspacenyc.com) and Columbus Circle Holiday Market at the south west entrance of Central Park (Nov. 30 to Dec. 24, urbanspacenyc.com). If the weather is glacial, try the indoor gift fair in the elegant Vanderbilt Hall of Grand Central Station (Nov. 14 to Dec. 24, grandcentralterminal.com).

As well as providing a brilliant one-stop gift shop for time-poor tourists, department stores from Bloomingdale's and Macy's to toys-

If you go...

After all of that shopping, you're going to need to treat yourself to a well-earned night of rest in a high-end hotel.

STUDENT VOICE

VERED BEN
TALENTEGG.CA

I began working well before I started university. I loved working with children and found summer and after-school jobs first as a babysitter, then at a camp and then at a daycare.

After high school, I travelled and took courses abroad and came back around the winter semester.

Because I did not return to school right away, I suddenly had a lot of time on my hands. I used this time to discover what I was most passionate about.

I also realized that I needed a plan, because I knew that financing my university education on my own would be a challenge.

Since I intended to pursue a kinesiology arts degree, I enrolled in courses to become certified as a personal trainer and pilates instructor.

I knew it would be difficult to find a well paying part-time position as a student and I realized that being certified would allow me to earn money to pay for my education and also gain relevant experience during my studies in kinesiology.

certified, I was excited to find a job at a local gym. But, when I returned to school full-time, my schedule often conflicted with work and it was difficult to balance both. So I quit my job.

I realized that starting my own fitness equipment and fitness apparel business might be a great idea since it would allow me to create my own work schedule.

I did a little bit of further research on how one starts their own business and I discovered that it would require a lot of money, time and space — none of which I had.

Since I always loved making jewelry and designing, I decided that for the time being I would sell accessories.

I found several suppliers, designed my website and logo with a major design company, and then launched my accessories business, veredben.com.

In my third year as a student, I finally felt ready to pursue my passion in the fitness and health industry.

I started V2Be, a fitness training program for women and girls. I developed a curriculum and launched an after school fitness program that focuses on healthy living and self-esteem building for children.

It has definitely been a challenge combining school with business, but it is absolutely amazing to have the flexibility of creating my own schedule and deciding how much work I want to put in and when.

Although I am only doing this business part-time, I have the option of pursuing it full-time when I graduate.

Most career centres and schools focus a lot on grades, career options and resumés, and usually do not let students think outside the box when it comes to job searching. I think schools should help students see that working for yourself can be a great option.

Most college seniors are crazy busy: working on a capstone project, mopping up requirements and squeezing in one more internship.

Unfortunately, there's one other thing to take care of now: It's not too early to start looking for a job.

"It is critical that students prepare ahead of time, especially in a tough economy," says Nick Schaefer, director of career services at Gwynedd-Mercy College in the U.S..

"New graduates are having more trouble than ever before in landing full-time jobs related to their field."

There are several elements to an effective job search, Schaefer explains. One of the most important is networking. "Net-needs to begin earlier than later," Schaefer emphasizes.

In order to network effectively, you'll need to do some groundwork:

1. Put together your resumé and cover letter.

2. Talk to the people you'd like to serve as references and get full contact information.

By doing so you're letting them know that you're actively looking in case they hear of a job you'd be a good fit for.

3. If you're not on LinkedIn yet, create a profile as soon as you can. Look for appropriate groups to join, including professional groups, industry groups and alumni from your school.

Khabibulin baffles Habs

► Oilers goalie makes 28 saves in Montreal as Oilers post seventh win in eight games

PAUL CHIASSON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

OILERS	CANADIENS

► Nikolai Khabibulin makes a save on Montreal's Max Pacioretty last night.

As hot as veteran Ryan Smyth has been, he was quick to give goaltender Nikolai Khabibulin much of the credit for the streaking Edmonton Oilers' latest victory.

Smyth had a goal and an assist but Khabibulin was the difference as the Oilers downed the Montreal Canadiens 3-1 despite being outshot 29-14 last night.

"Great goaltending gave us a chance," said Smyth, who has nine points in his last five games. "Habby's been playing superb all year.

"In the third they had some chances but we found a way to hold on. It was a good road win."

Ryan Jones scored short handed and Tom Gilbert got the game-winner for the Northwest Division-leading Oilers (9-3-2), who rebounded from a 4-2 loss to Phoenix on Saturday to post their seventh win in eight games.

They have surrendered one or fewer goals in seven of their 14 games and Khabibulin has dominated the league's goaltending statistics since the start of the season.

"I wouldn't say all season long because it hasn't been long yet, but I felt pretty good," the 38-year-old said. "I think we're all playing well, so that helps."

Max Pacioretty scored for the Canadiens (5-7-2), who have lost two in a row and have scored one or fewer goals in six of their defeats.

Pacioretty's team-leading sixth of the season came 22 seconds after Gilbert put Edmonton ahead 2-0 at 16:28 of the third period. The big winger swept in on the right side and saw his backhand go off Gilbert's stick, change speed and fool Khabibulin between the pads.

That brought the Bell Centre crowd of 21,273 to life after seeing the home team checked tightly by the speedy Oilers and thwarted time and again by the big Russian goaltender. But Smyth ended the threat with an empty-net goal with 43 seconds to play.

"We had a lot of opportunities to score, but Khabibulin played well and we weren't able to cash in on a lot of really good opportunities," said Erik Cole, who was Montreal's best forward on the night with five shots on goal and a strong physical effort throughout the game. "It could have been a much different game if we could have cashed in on a couple."

Montreal coach Jacques Martin felt his team played well enough to win, generating 17 scoring chances, but fell victim to a hot goalie and some bad luck. Michael Cammalleri hit two goalposts, while Edmonton had Gilbert's harmless looking shot go in off defenceman Josh Gorges.

"They have the best goals-against in the league," Martin said of the Oilers. "They're a good team with a lot of speed and talent, but we dominated them in scoring chances. You're disappointed with the score, but it wasn't a lack of effort or execution."

Penn State trustees launch probe into scandal engulfing Paterno

Coach Joe Paterno is fighting for his job amid "eroding" support from Penn State's board of trustees and a widening sex-abuse scandal and possible cover up centred on former assistant and one-time heir apparent Jerry Sandusky.

Paterno's regularly scheduled news conference was abruptly cancelled yesterday. A university spokesman cited "ongoing legal circumstances," a reference to charges announced over the weekend that Sandusky molested eight young boys between 1994 and 2009, and that two PSU administrators who have since stepped aside failed to notify authorities of a 2002 incident reported by an eyewitness.

Late last night, the board said it would appoint a special committee to conduct an investigation into the "circumstances" that resulted in the indictments of Sandusky, athletic director Tim Curley and vice-president Gary Schultz. The committee will be appointed Friday at the board's regular meeting, which Gov. Tom Corbett said will examine "what failures occurred and who is responsible and what measures are necessary to ensure" similar mistakes aren't made in the future.

NBA LOCKOUT

Players reject offer

Union president Derek Fisher says his orders from NBA players are clear: No deal.

"The current offer on the table from the NBA is one that we cannot accept," he said yesterday.

Instead, the players said they will ask for another meeting with the owners before commissioner David Stern's afternoon deadline today.

Stern has said that if the players don't take the current deal by then, the league's next offer will be much worse.

The players insisted they will not be forced into taking a bad deal by an ultimatum.

"The players are saying that we understand their position, but unfortunately we're not intimidated by that," union executive director Billy Hunter said.

Battery system & engine

The battery system — in fact the Hybrid's entire powertrain for that matter — has been lifted from the Hyundai Sonata Hybrid and consists of a 270-volt lithium-polymer battery that's claimed to be lighter and more durable than other types, such as the lithium-ion cells installed in the Chevrolet Volt and the Nissan Leaf electric cars.

The battery feeds a 40-horsepower electric motor that functions in tandem with a 166-horsepower 2.4-litre four-cylinder engine, for a combined 206 horsepower.

Comparison

The Optima Hybrid is capable of speeds up to 100 km/h on electric power alone, compared to 75 km/h for the Ford Fusion and for short bursts up to 40 km/h for the 2012 Toyota Camry Hybrid.

However, the Optima's estimated 5.6 l/100 km city and 4.9 highway fuel economy falls short of the Camry's 4.5/4.9 and the Ford Fusion's 4.6/5.4 city/highway ratings.

Fuel-sipping features

The Hybrid uses a special six-speed-automatic transmission that operates without a traditional torque converter, again a departure from most hybrid cars that use continuously variable transmissions. The top three gear ratios have been designed so that the engine runs at the lowest-possible engine speed to help save fuel.

The car also features low-rolling-resistance tires and an integrated starter-generator that shuts off the gas engine when the vehicle is stopped.

► Designer Peter Schreyer is known for the Audi A6 and the TT. Now he's known for the Kia Optima.

Can fuel-saving look this good?

If your passion for cars is matched only by your determination to avoid $1.25/litre fuel stops, the Kia Optima Hybrid appears to have been built just for you.

The Korea-based automaker, part of the Hyundai organization, has been aggressively introducing an array of new products at a relentless pace.

As a result, the company's adolescent-like growth spurt has rapidly brought it into the automotive mainstream where previously it had been considered just a bit player.

For the 2011 model year, Kia issued forth an all new Optima sedan, designed by former Volkswagen-Audi stylist Peter Schreyer who is credited with the look of Audi's A6 sedan and sporty TT coupe and roadster.

Since his arrival at Kia back in 2006, the brand's design "language" has headed off in a completely different direction from parent Hyundai's.

The Optima and its gasoline-electric Hybrid offshoot are shining examples.

Both mid-size four-door sedans appear nearly identical, yet the Hybrid features a slightly different grille, unique 16-inch wheels and extra lower cladding. LED (Light Emitting Diode) tail lamps and a Hybrid badge affixed to the trunk lid.

TESLA GOES BIG ... NOT PREPARED TO GO HOME

AUTO PILOT

MIKE GOETZ
DRIVE
@METRONEWS.CA

Regardless of your personal prognostications about whether electric vehicles will or will not rule the roads in the near or far future, you have to admire the considerable conviction of Tesla's co-founder and CEO, Elon Musk.

The considerable fortune he made through PayPal and other ventures he then sunk into the Tesla electric vehicle adventure.

Soon after he took the company public last summer it purchased a huge factory, the ex-Toyota plant in Fremont, California.

By next summer the plant will begin shipping out production versions of the new Tesla Model S — an all-electric luxury sedan. While about 5,000 units will be built in 2012, Musk fully expects to be building and selling 20,000 units of Model S during 2013. In that year he also expects to build and sell an additional 15,000 units of Model X, a yet-to-be-introduced crossover based on the platform debuted

► The Tesla Model S is an all-electric luxury sedan. Its electric drivetrain is located between the two rear wheels. This allows the car to have two trunks — one in the front, in addition to the standard rear trunk. As for that front trunk, you can just call it a “frunk.”

by the Model S.

All this in a hairy economic market, and a marketplace where electric cars have yet to prove their mettle, business case, infrastructure requirements, consumer acceptance, etcetera, etcetera.

That, my friends, is a decisive, unwavering, non fence-sitter kind of a guy. Unlike myself, of course, whose favourite joke is this one: “Do you have trouble making up your mind? Well, yes and no.”

Last month, Tesla invited all its deposit holders to the plant, so they could witness in person the unveiling of the production-ready Model S. Over 3,000 made the trip and by all accounts, treated Musk like a rock star.

To keep the buzz going, Tesla has been taking the Model S to selected North American cities. Last week it landed in Toronto, and we decided to mosey on down to have a look.

First impression? It's a pretty car, but also a bit coy about its electric nature.

One of the Tesla's handlers, Camille Ricketts, told me the look is purposely familiar, to help ease consumers into the electric movement. She noted that interior packaging is where the more dramatic gains of electric propulsion are leveraged.

With battery cells packaged in the floor, and the entire electric drivetrain packaged between the two rear wheels, the rest of the vehicle can be utilized for people and stuff.

Model S has a trunk at each end of the car and three rows of seats. (FYI, the “trunk” at the front is now called a “frunk.”)

But the most dramatic feature of Model S is its incredible touch-screen interface — at 43 cm, it is about the size of two iPads.

“All the car controls are baked into this one touch-screen,” says Ricketts. And if you don't believe her, just go and try to find some buttons, switches or knobs... The sunroof even opens by sliding your finger down the screen.

“We really think this is going to be the future of interior car control,” adds Ricketts, “because it's so easily update-able.”

It can be easily updated because it is connected to the Internet via the 3G networks, allowing the car and driver to take advantage of any future software or application revelation.

Tesla also feels that vehicles are the new platform for application development, and is excited about working with app developers.

Charging standards will drive electric cars

► Some things still need to be finalized concerning EVs

DRIVING FORCE

JILL MCINTOSH
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

It's possible to buy an electric car these days, but that doesn't mean they are yet in widespread use. The infrastructure to recharge them is still in its infancy, including some of the standards that will help to ensure uniformity.

Some standards have been determined but several still need to be finalized, says Ian Forsyth, director of corporate planning for Nissan, which makes the all-electric Leaf. Most buyers right now will be charging their vehicles at home, but eventually, widespread consumer acceptance depends on being able to top up the battery at public charging stations, the same way conventional cars can pull into gas stations.

"The receptacle on the car for charging is an SAE standard, that's established," Forsyth says.

"But the vehicle supply equipment, the interface between the car and the grid — those standards are not resolved. The cord, temperature resistance, the amperage rating of the unit itself, the waterproofness, other overload issues and all of those things are part of it."

CSA is the lead body for

► Nissan Leaf

Electric cars can charge on regular 110-volt household current, but charging them on 240-volt can cut the charging time by half or more.

certification in Canada and is working on the standards, but they are not yet complete, Forsyth says.

"There's no risk (to electric cars) because we know what the standards will be, but they're not officially out there. It's one of those odd problems that happens with standards."

One important decision has already been made: universal plugs on charging stations.

"Every charging station will charge every electric vehicle in Canada," Forsyth says. When a car is plugged in, the car and station "talk" to each other.

Once it's determined that the car is plugged in and there is no fault, the power starts flowing.

Standards are being developed for "level 3" quick-chargers, which use direct current to charge a car in less than 30 minutes.

These are already in use in Japan, where a standard has been established, but are very rare in North America. Forsyth believes there is only one in Canada, located in British Columbia.

Setting standards is relatively simple in Canada and the U.S. compared with Europe, Forsyth says.

"Almost every country (in Europe) has a completely different way of connecting to the grid. Their plugs are different from country to country. Standardization not only deals with the car end of it, but the grid end."

"In North America that's not a problem because the plugs are standardized."

Guide to winter tires

► Still sitting on the fence about getting winter tires this year? Want them, but don't know where to start? ► You're in the right place for tire advice ► Sufficient tread is essential for any tire to work properly and safely. An all-season tire with good tread depth is superior to a winter tire with its tread worn down.

JILL MCINTOSH
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

As the seasons change, so should your tires.

You've probably noticed that the nastier-weather varieties are now called winter tires, rather than snow tires. This isn't just the same product with a new name.

Winter tires provide superior traction in all types of winter conditions, from deep snow, to puddles, to dry pavement.

The main differences between tires are in their tread and rubber compounds. Winter treads are more aggressive so they can bite into snow, and push slush and water out of the way.

This is very important, since tires that don't properly channel water can create a situation, called hydroplaning, where the tire floats on top of puddles instead of maintaining contact with the asphalt below.

If your car hydroplanes, you don't have control of it.

The formulation of the rubber compound is also important, as rubber gets soft in the heat and hard in the cold — exactly the opposite of what you want it to do in your tire.

The softer compound in winter tires helps them to stick to the pavement, although it does make them wear faster, one of the trade-offs of good winter tires.

So-called "all-season"

At just 7C, winter tires grip cold, dry pavement better than all-season tires, reducing your stopping distances and improving your vehicle's handling.

tires are halfway between summer and winter ones.

They're better described as "three-season" tires, since they're inferior to the performance of winter tires at a time when driving can be most treacherous. Some companies offer a new "four-season" version, which meets winter tire standards, identified on all tires that do so by a stylized logo of a mountain and snowflake moulded into the sidewall.

These four-season tires primarily use an all-season compound with a more aggressive tread, which will be noisier in summer and use more fuel.

Good tires aren't cheap, but the highest price doesn't always guarantee the most appropriate tire. Several consumer groups rate winter tires; in Canada, the Automobile Protection Association offers a free comparison chart of some 50 tires at APA.ca.

Switching to winter tires in the fall will not only improve the driving experience, but will extend the life of your all-season tires.

No bull from this Bimmer

► Highly-acclaimed BMW 1M Coupe is a slick performance weapon

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

BMW's sort of cut right to the point with their 1-Series M Coupe, so I'm going to do the same.

BMW's 'M' division took the regular 1-Series and tweaked it — adding significantly to the styling and performance of the standard car. It recently topped the AJAC Best New Sports and Performance Car Over $50,000 category, as voted by a panel of professional Canadian car reviewers.

The 1M looks like a big deal. In gearhead circles, arriving somewhere in a 1M is like showing up to a party with your new best friend Brad Pitt. Power comes from a three-litre straight six twin-turbo engine with 335 ponies, which provides very potent acceleration that'll make the rear end squirm for grip through most of first and second.

Price as tested: $61,800

Gears shift quickly via a short, tight six-speed shifter, and the sound from the exhaust system is sweet and saturating — even at idle. Stand on it, and the 1M blasts down the road quickly enough to make passengers drop F-Bombs. Even in sixth, squeezing the throttle summons a surge of torque that sends it sailing past slower traffic in a jiff.

There's no sissy stuff, here. You can't even get the 1M with a sunroof, fog-lamps, or an automatic. With the quick, heavy steering and track-tuned suspension, you've got a car that's well equipped to chew through straight stretches, corners and everything in between. You can feel everything the chassis is up to when you push the 1M hard.

Unfortunately, this is a car that thanks you for pushing it hard. It'll get the hearts of enthusiasts pumping faster than downing a family-sized poutine, and the performance is so obnoxious, it'll make you want to drive like you're from Montreal.

Watch for speeding tickets.

Inside, the tester got suede trim, a unique instrument cluster, and a mainly black colour scheme. It's all simple and focused. Wider folks may find the seats uncomfortable, and larger folks will find entry and exit tight. A little more at-hand storage would have been appreciated.

The loaded tester came at just over $61,000 — expensive in light of models that pack plenty more under-hood artillery for similar money, but a hell of a deal, too. For instance, the 1M is 90 per cent as fun to drive as a Porsche 911 GTS, but for half the price.

Put the 1M on your "To Test Drive" list if you're after a fast, focused, ferocious, no-b.s. performance weapon.

Comfort and prestige defined last-gen Audi A8

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

One of the best ways to cut through upcoming winter driving conditions is in the lap of German engineered AWD luxury from the driver's seat of an Audi A8.

The last-generation of Audi's flagship sedan model was available from 2004 to 2010.

It packed plenty of space, 8- or 12-cylinder power and Quattro All Wheel Drive (AWD) on all models. Translation? The A8 can comfortably eat any of Mother Nature's nastiest winter conditions for lunch.

Engine

A8 came with a proven 4.2-litre V-8 developing between 330 and 350 horsepower.

A six-litre W-12 engine was also available with 450 horsepower.

What owners like

Owners rave about a sense of style, status and exclusivity, as well as a long list of safety features and the confidence of Quattro AWD.

Comfort, space and performance were all highly rated, too.

What owners dislike

Some owners wish their A8's were easier to park, and others wish for better fuel mileage. Finally, many A8 owners report a learning curve required to use the more advanced controls.

Common issues

Numerous Audi owner forums recommend avoiding the first year (2004) of this A8 generation, as it seems less reliable. The A8 should also be scrutinized for electrical problems, with shoppers advised to ensure all power accessories, readouts and lights work as expected. Avoid A8 models with the adaptive air suspension, which will be expensive to fix if it fails. As a bare minimum, visit an Audi garage and have your used A8 candidate checked for coolant, oil and transmission fluid leaks.

Verdict

If you're comfortable with the potential maintenance pricetag, a well-maintained A8 will deliver confident, year-round motoring enjoyment in one of the market's most highly envied large sedans.
